The Halth Officer forther said that he was especially glad to give this information to the Board, for the reason that he did not wish to appear as antaginistic, at this line day of the season, with the Southfield Board of Bealth, which has so faithfully co-operated with him an the island in preserving the public health. He surfice said that the people of Southfield, in his opinion, were much indebted to their Baard of Health for the exemption which they had enjoyed from yellow fever; that the said Board, at an early day after the fever began to be freely imported, efficiently assisted in prohibiting and yevening intercourse and communisation between the affected vessels at Quarantine and the shores of Southfield, and that he verily believes if a similar course has per would have less reason to mours the loss of valuable citizens.

Dr. Rockwall, Resident Physician, said that the report which has been published in most of all the city papers stating that epidemic cases of yellow fever has assisted whilm the object in business interests of the whole city. He said that the peril will be held made the sepecial business to see every suspicious case of reported fever, and that he was presented to the Board. ASSEMBLY NOMINATION.

brought together a greater number of fashionable people than has been seen within the walk of the Academy this year. That edifice was crammed, from the parquette to the amphitheatre, by a splendidly got up audience, and the ensemble was splendid. We reviewed this opera year terday, from the dress rehearsal of Monday, which was quite the same as a full performance. The favorable opinions then expressed, both of the opera and of its performance, were strengthened by the performance of last night. The first act was delicious—nothing equal to it, in the operatic way, has been beard here within our recollection. This was owing almost enbere within our recollection. This was owing almost entirely to the excellent singing and acting of Mme. do is Grange, to whose voice and style the music is admirably adapted, and who has select upon the strong points in her part, theatrically appaking, with the perception of a thorough artist. The music of the first act is an near the per fection at the art as we can hope for. The prayer and cavatina of Catterina, forming the finale, were finely or ecoted, and a sparkling duet between Catterina and Prascovia brought down the house, which had before been a little coel. Madame do la Grange and Hom. Martick, who gave her moreows—and a capital of et its.—expressive of fright at the Consacks, very nicely, were called before the curtain. The second act is chiefly milliary, but has a capital quintette and a glorious march. The third act is full of musical beauties, chiefly for Catterina, and they were well interpreted by La Grange, who must have the undivided honora of the night. The opera was finely put upon the stage, and the glories of the mate en scene were on every tongue. The chorus was strong and well up to their work, and it is evident that a great deal of care has been taken in get tring up the opera. That there were some little contre forget is almost a necessary consequence of the nervous ness attendant upon a first night. The opera had six mouths' rehearms in Faria, and we were assured by persons who load seen it there that the Academy performance would compare favorably with that of the Opera Comique. The opera is long and dafficult, and as a work of art must place its component at the head of living masters. It is full of the most delicious reusie, all adapted with the nicest perception to the illustration of the dramatic situation. The performance were not concluded until near midnight, and was a vertuable ruccess. Maretook deserves credit for piscing this great work before the public, and also togethe recovered falteries designs of the popular estrem. The opera will be received Batteries tokens of the tirely to the excellent singleg and acting of Mme. de la
